

September 1, 1999

Jane Henney, M.D.
Commissioner of FDA
5600 Fishers Lane, Room 1471
Rockville, MD 20857

8592 '99 091 -6 10102

Dear Ms. Henney,

I recently read an article in Healthy Living entitled, "Coming to a Supermarket Near You--Genetically engineered food at a glance." I was appalled to learn that the FDA is allowing bioengineered, GMO's, food to be created and distributed to supermarkets and the public! I am appalled at half the stuff the FDA allows to hit the market, but this takes the cake!

I'm not going to write paragraph after paragraph telling you just what humans are going to be facing--disease, death, the list is endless--because you know; you just don't care. I'm sure you understand that the FDA is responsible for most of the disease out there today. For instance, the chemicals you allow in meat literally feeds cancer. What is it going to take--how much more disease has to kill before you people wake up and start going back to organic foods--the way nature intended. And it's sad to think what this world is coming to. You people are digging our graves and yours!

What is even worse is that lunatics that think they want to eat this Frankenfood will be no different than the concerned population because you won't even label the food that has GMO's. And what's more, because genes can drift from an engineered crop's field to theirs, some "organically-grown food" inadvertently becomes engineered!! Please at least consider labeling these foods so Americans can choose!

You'd be surprised to hear how many people strongly feel that the government should do away with the FDA and get some real experts who are sincerely concerned with the health of humans more than the almighty dollar.

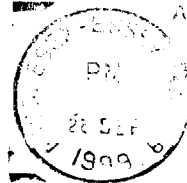

Very concerned,

Sarah L. Trepanier

92N-0139

C6077

RECEIVED
OCT 1 9 13 AM '99
EXECUTIVE BRIAT

Jane Henney, M.D.

Commissioner of USFDA

5600 Fishers Lane, Rm. 1471

Rockville, MD 20857

